Assignment 2 - Henry Woodyard

In the following two sections, I import necessary libraries and create useful functions. Please run these before proceeding to Question 1.

Question 2

Question Text: "Using the Users.xml file, provide the count for all users which joined (CreationDate) in 2017. Output this to the screen."

In [4]:   # Filters the RDD to only elements with CreationDates of 2017 madeIn2017 = userdata.filter(lambda line: GetYear(GetAttributeValue(line, 'Cre ationDate', punct = True)) == '2017')

          # Gets the names of the users in the filtered RDD

          print("A total of", users2017.count(), "users joined in 2017.")

A total of 14239 users joined in 2017.

Question 3

Question Text: "Using the PostHistory file, count the number of Posts that feature the words 'Spark' and 'Scala'. Output this to the screen. (20 points)"

In [5]: # Import post history posts = sc.textFile("PostHistory.xml")

        # Remove common XML formatting from text. This helps identification of words.
        posts = posts.map(lambda line: removeXMLFormatting(line))

        # Require posts to have the words spark and scala sparkScalaMentioned_NoSpace = posts.filter(lambda line: GetAttributeValue(line
        , 'Text').find('spark') > 0

        # Require posts to have the words spark or scala sparkScalaMentioned_Space = posts.filter(lambda line: GetAttributeValue(line,
        'Text').find(' spark ') > 0
                                                 and GetAttributeValue(line, 'T ext').find(' scala ') > 0) print("In both of the following methods, I do not subset by PostHistoryTypeId.

        This means that this methods \ searches over all elements in the PostHistory file, including titles, tags, et c.\n")

        print("A total of", sparkScalaMentioned_Space.count(), "posts were found inclu ding the words 'spark' and 'scala' using a method \ requiring that the words be surrounded by spaces.\n") print("A total of", sparkScalaMentioned_NoSpace.count(), "posts were found inc luding the words 'spark' and 'scala' using a method \ that does not require that the words be surrounded by spaces. this could lead to words like \

        'sparkling' and 'scalable' being counted, and is probably inflated.")

In both of the following methods, I do not subset by PostHistoryTypeId. This means that this methods searches over all elements in the PostHistory file, including titles, tags, etc.

A total of 72 posts were found including the words 'spark' and 'scala' using a method requiring that the words be surrounded by spaces.

A total of 202 posts were found including the words 'spark' and 'scala' using a method that does not require that the words be surrounded by spaces. this could lead to words like 'sparkling' and 'scalable' being counted, and is probably inflated.

Question 4

Question Text: "Using the PostHistory file, provide a total count of the words used by each distinct user. In other words, count all words in all posts for each user and display this to screen. You can only identify users by the UserID (30 points). You get 15 bonus points if you get the actual DisplayName of the user"

In [6]:
```python
Get only UserId and text. Don't filter by any type of PostHistoryTypeId.
userPosts = posts.map(lambda line: (GetAttributeValue(line, 'UserId', punct=True), GetAttributeValue(line, 'Text', spaces=True, numbers=False)))

Split the text for each user into a list of words.
userWords = userPosts.map(lambda pair: (pair[0], list(pair[1].split(" "))))

Count the length of the list of words for each user.

Because each user has multiple entries, reduce by key.
summedCounts = counts.reduceByKey(lambda x, y: x + y)

Merge the DisplayNames from the user data file with the UserIds.
linkedNames = userdata.map(lambda line: (GetAttributeValue(line, 'Id', punct=True), GetAttributeValue(line, 'DisplayName', punct=True)))
mergedNames = summedCounts.leftOuterJoin(linkedNames)

print("Displaying the number of words used by user for", mergedNames.count(), "users.") print("(UserId, (Number of words, DisplayName))")

for line in mergedNames.collect():
    print(line)

Question 5

Question Text: "GRADUATE STUDENTS: Using the users.xml, comments.xml and PostHistory.xml files, produce a single file that includes the following information: DisplayName, Number of Comments, total Score and Number of posts. This file should have the users (DisplayName) sorted by score, descending from higher to lower. (40 points)"

In [14]:

```python
comments = sc.textFile("Comments.xml")

Key-value pairs of (UserId, comment score)
userScores = comments.map(lambda line: (GetAttributeValue(line, "UserId"), int(GetAttributeValue(line, "Score", r eturnNA=False))))
This sums the score over each user
totalUserScore = userScores.reduceByKey(lambda x, y: x + y)

Key-value pairs of (UserId, 1) for each comment in the file
userComments = comments.map(lambda line: (GetAttributeValue(line, "UserId"), 1
Since there is a key-value pair of (UserId, 1) for each comment, upon being
 reduced
we get (UserId, N), where N is the number of comments
totalUserComments = userComments.reduceByKey(lambda x, y: x + y)

Filtering to only have titles of posts rather than body text.
titlesOnly = posts.filter(lambda line: GetAttributeValue(line, 'PostHistoryTyp eId') == '1')
Key-value pairs of (UserId, 1) for each post in the file.
userPosts = titlesOnly.map(lambda line: (GetAttributeValue(line, 'UserId'), 1
totalUserPosts = userPosts.reduceByKey(lambda x, y: x + y)

Join the various metrics we're concerned with. Also prints to console the nu

```python
Rearrange the content of each key-value pair to be in the order specified in
the problem.
It looks messy due to the nesting from the merges, but the resulting data is
in the following order:

DisplayName, number of comments, total score, total posts
masterClean = master.map(lambda line: (line[1][1], line[1][0][0][1], line[1][0 ][0][0], line[1][0][1]))

Sort by total comment score and save as text file.

core, Number of Posts)
Finished writing.

Note:

In the above section of code, I merge the score and comments RDD with the user posts RDD with a leftOuterJoin. There are many users with posts but no comments. I decide to do this to remove them from the data, as the resulting None for comment count and score seem to go against what you expect for the rest of the problem.
